Osteopathy's Promise to Children

Course Description

This course is designed to systematically introduce and review significant cranial nerve:

- anatomical and functional considerations
- respective physical examination skills
- applied osteopathic perspectives and treatments within the model of Osteopathy in the Cranial Field
- clinical correlations

If you have any questions about this educational program, please contact staff at cme@the-promise.org or by calling our office at 619-548-8815.

Educational Need

The clinical significance of patients suffering from cranial nerve neuropathies encompass the spectrum from debilitating pain to muscular and visceral dysfunction. The neuropathic pathogenesis may be of an organic or teratogenic nature, but frequently it can be a consequence of significant trauma that compromises anatomical structure, thus lending itself to an integrated osteopathic approach in patient care. Osteopathic medical curriculum has long observed the importance of facile clinical knowledge of the cranial nerves. However, the complexity of the subject matter, evolving anatomical explorations/neurologic mapping, and an underappreciated cranial nerve

Osteopathic perspective, lends the subject ripe for review. Additionally, practiced cranial nerve physical examination skills are a requirement in sensitively observing clinical cranial nerve dysfunction.

Evidence-based Resources

1. Overview of Craniofacial Pain, Ho et al. UpToDate 8/21/2020
2. Entrapment Neuropathy of the Central Nervous System, Magoun, JAOA April 1968 Vol. 67
3. Entrapment Neuropathy of the Central Nervous System, Magoun, JAOA March 1968 Vol. 67

Learning Objectives

Upon completion of this course, the participant will be able to:

- List the 13 cranial nerves by name and function
- Identify common clinical presentations and their associations to specific cranial nerves
- Identify anatomical entrapment locations that lend themselves to osteopathic considerations and treatment

(Osteopathic Principles and Practice, Medical Knowledge and Its Application into Osteopathic Medical Practice, Osteopathic Patient Care).

Target Audience

This activity is open for all osteopathic and medical physicians (DO/MD), Dentist (DDS/DMD), Medical Student (DO/MD), and International Osteopaths.
